

Predictions for 2022: Brace yourself

Jason Leek

Chief executive, Riverstone

This is going to be an exciting year for Riverstone. Not only will we be welcoming our first residents into our Kensington and Fulham residences, but we also expect to be expanding our portfolio with new acquisitions.

With prospective residents rightly enquiring about our sustainability credentials, we expect to see greater commitment to environmental and sustainable values from the industry this year.

We have set ourselves ambitious ESG targets across our residences. This includes exploring new technologies and innovations that improve our overall energy consumption and reduce our carbon footprint, as well as avoiding landfill waste at all costs and ensuring we do not use single-use plastic.

We are also looking forward to expanding on this from a social perspective by creating hubs at our residences that promote social connectivity, intergenerational activity and a positive approach to wellbeing.